Hot Time in Venezuela.

Winnipeg, Jan. 22.
Maracabo, Venezuela, Jan. 21.—Three German war ships, supposed to be the Panther, the Vineta, and the Falke, began shelling the fort of San Carlos at half-past ten o'clock this morning. The fort returned fire. The engagement was in progress at one o'clock this afternoon. The correspondent of the Associated Press in a row boat approached to within three miles of the fort at noon. The roar of guns was terrific. The Panther appeared to be not more than 500 yards from the fort. Her guns were fired every minute. The fort could not be seen for clouds of smoke, but it was plain that Venezuelan gunners were answering the German fire plainly and with great rapidity. At one o'clock in the afternoon an explosion occurred apparently in the fort and a dense cloud of smoke covered part of the ramparts. A number of Indian fishermen were intercepted fleeing from the direction of the fort in their dugout canoes. They reported that smoke could be seen from the burning village of San Carlos which had been shelled by German ships and was in flames. The shelling of San Carlos has created much excitement among German residents of the fort who have protested against the action of the warships.

AS TO POSSIBLE

TARIFF CHANGES

In view of the tremendous pressure that will be brought to bear on parliament at its next session to secure a higher tariff, it is in order for those whose interests are against such increase to make their minds known in good time. Apparently there is a belief amongst some self styled liberals that whatever the party wills it may do. That should the party leaders decide for a prohibitive tariff, such a decision would strengthen the party in its hold upon the government of the country. They argue "We have the liberals now, and the conservatives would have to support their own policy. We could afford to lose a few liberal kickers for the gain we would make." Such arguments are not high politics, and it is not good politics. For when that or like argument is used another comes ready to hand. "If the party which we have supported comes to uphold the principles in which we believe, there is no reason why we should longer support them." For instance: The sentiment of the Far West and the Far East is for low tariff. They support the liberal party to-day very largely because it stands for lower tariff than the conservatives. But if the liberals adopt high tariff upon what grounds can they claim or expect that support. As the Regina Standard put it recently: "If we are to have high tariff we would rather have it at the hands of those who believe in it than at the hands of those who adopted it from motives of expediency. Liberals should not forget that if liberalism is not principle it is nothing. Liberals cannot be held together as a party by the means of the prospect of the spoils of office. If they could they would not be liberals. The liberal party grew strong and finally became victorious because it was essentially the party of principle. Let it advertise itself by a reversal of policy as the party of mere expediency and while it may gain spoils-hunters as adherents, it will lose the main force which gives it existence and holds it together."

FROM THE FAR NORTH
Last Resolution, B.W.P., Nov. 20, '02.
Edmonton Bulletin.

A word or two from Great Slave Lake and the far north. Our people have been very sad and downhearted this past summer, so many having died from the measles. Fort Smith had seventeen deaths, Resolution thirty-one, Yellow Knife, just a small band of Dogrib Indians, twenty-seven deaths. They are the only ones who have come in since treaty. The other bands have not been heard from, except by those Dogrib who saw the others on their way out to their hunting grounds. There were twelve children from their party had died, that is the first time in thirty years that these Indians have failed to come for the furs for their little supplies. We are looking for very bad news from that quarter. The greater part of them will have succumbed to the dreaded measles. When anything like that gets amongst them they are perfectly helpless, and will not hunt, fish or do anything but lie around their camps. Hay river was also visited by the measles and there was thirteen deaths in that small band of that a few souls and a great many were still sick, both at the mission and in the woods. Of course a great many more will have died.

Baptist Minister, of Providence, in charge of a post for Helen & Nagle, lost his youngest child, the whole family was down at one time. The little child lived but a few minutes after his father's arrival. The steamer was held over there for one day in order to assist at the funeral which took place the following day at 3:30 p. m. There was a very large number of friends and relatives attended as he is a very popular personage in that place.

I also felt for the poor sisters. Just fancy six of them tending about fifty Indian children. They looked very tired and almost done up. In spite of all their kind and attentive nursing several of their patients died. There was also a great many deaths outside the convent in the little village and amongst the Indians in the woods. At Fort Simpson fortunately but few died. At Fort Wrigley several deaths occurred. It is a very unfortunate place, some two years ago a great many died from a gripe. At Fort Norman, but few died. At the time of my passing there no deaths had been reported to us.

Good Hope was not so fortunate. Several were thus sick and a great many deaths had taken place. Both daughters of Mr. Gaudet, officer in charge of the Hudson's Bay Co's trading post of that place, were ill with the measles, but I am happy to say that they have thoroughly recovered and are none the worse from their illness. Miss E. Gaudet, who is staying with her brother at Resolution, was down to Good Hope last spring, and made a short stay with her family and returned on the last trip of the Wrigley looking much better. F. C. Gaudet was up to Fort Smith last September for a short visit with his little steamer Argo, and had a very pleasant trip.

The Roman Catholic mission have put up a very nice little saw mill on a site, 2 miles from Resolution and have been able to saw five hundred saw logs. They are now building a large building to be finished by spring as they are expecting six sisters who are coming to open up a school for the Indians. They intend putting up a large convent next summer.

Hilop & Nagle have built a new warehouse, twenty by thirty.

Fishing was very good last fall the catch being about forty thousand. Hilop & Nagle 8,000 lbs., R. C. 8,000, R. C. mission 8,000 and Swiggart 7,000. The rest are in possession of several half-breeds.

Mr. Nagle, of Hilop & Nagle, brought down a horse the first of the horse kind so far north.

J. E. Kelly is putting a new engine in the steamer Eva Nagle and will also put in a new engine and boiler in Hilop & Nagle's new steamer Alfa, which will ply between Smith Landing and McMurray to tow scows down and bring back their furs in the fall.

LACOMBE

Homestead entries in the Lacombe sub-town agency numbered 623 during the year 1902, and cash collected amounted to $8,501. The heaviest month's business was in April, during which 116 entries were made. In 1901 homestead entries numbered 417 and cash collected amounted to $7,594. The proportionately larger cash total of 1901 was because of payments on land sales. Sharphead Indian reserve, has now been sold.

Lacombe has been a centre of cattle raising for years, but the farmers have not until recently gone in large force for horses. Within the past week or two, however, three cars of live horses have been shipped from this point to Vancouver and another car is being made up.

As showing the extent to which cattle raising is carried on Mr. Gilmore reports that he has purchased in the north that is at Ponoka, Wetaskiwin and Edmonton 700 head of stockers, which have been sold to farmers and ranchers in the Lacombe district. Also that 200 head purchased at Innisfail and south had also been sold to La-

POLITICAL MEETING AT LACOMBE

A public meeting for the discussion of political questions was held here last evening. The meeting was held at the instance of the Lacombe Liberal Association, and the chair was taken by Mr. J. MacLeod, president of the association. An address was delivered by Frank Oliver, M. P. (Puffer's Hall) was well filled with a representative audience from town and country, who gave the speaker a most interested hearing and frequently expressed approval of his views. He alluded to the result of the last election and the present condition of the country. He drew attention to the difference between the leading ideas of liberalism and conservatism. The one stood for liberty and the other for stability. Which was the best policy for a country depended on the times, conditions and the practice which was associated with the policy. Liberty might mean anarchy and stability might mean stagnation. The tendency of liberalism was towards individual liberty and of conservatism towards strengthening the state. The liberal idea was that as the state was composed of its individual citizens what was best for the state was best for the citizen. The conservative idea was that as the state comprised the individual citizens what was best for the state was best for its citizens. In this country, at this time, and judged by results he believed that the liberal idea was the best. Under conservative administration in the effort to build up the state it had given such disregard of the rights and advantages of its citizens that Canada, and especially the Northwest, had stagnated under that policy. Since the accession to power of the liberal idea and the adoption of a policy whose object was to give the individual citizen the best opportunity that circumstances afforded, Canada entered upon an era of prosperity. By the Northwest conservative rule had meant high tariff and railway monopoly. Liberal rule had meant lower tariff, railway competition and the land for the settler. It was not chance on five of circumstances which had made the change in the condition of Canada or the Northwest. Coupled with the great resources of the country and the energy and industry of the people were the right policy and honest administration in the interest of the people.

The great prosperity of the country and consequent increase of imports, coupled with the tariff reductions that had been made by the liberals, had led to a demand by the manufacturers of Canada for a tariff high enough to protect such importations. What the shadow of the opposition had mildly spoken of as an adequate protection, this was the proposition that was coming before parliament in March, which would be pressed with all the strength that money and self interest and united chance could bring to bear, and what had already the specific endorsement of the conservative party. Such a policy was against the best interests of Canada, and was most directly against the best interests of the Northwest. It was not the tariff of 1893 that was in question, nor that of 1887, but a tariff higher than either—in fact a single tariff for Canada. Were the representatives of the Territories in favor of such a tariff? Did they believe it would be in the best interests of the country? Did they believe that it would be fair to the Northwest? Did they believe they would be doing right in supporting the party which supported such a policy? If they did not he asked them for their united support in opposing that policy when it was brought forward. A united effort of all the interests concerned was being made to force such a policy upon Canada. A united effort of the interested citizens was just as necessary, or even more necessary, to prevent the country against it.

The air was full of new railway schemes for the Northwest. Survey lines were being run and stakes were being put down all over the Saskatchewan valley. A marvelous change since a few years ago, and no pleasing as marvelous. But the railway companies were not more anxious to build railways than they were to get their money. He believed that there was room and opportunity for all the schemes yet proposed. It was a good feature of the case that the several schemes were by competitive companies. He would be glad to see them all succeed, provided they did not cost the country too much and provided value was received for money paid. He believed that it would be better for the Northwest to secure low rates over railway by the payment of a bonus than to get the railway for nothing without control of its rates. He would be willing to proportion the bonus to the measure of control; but no control, no bonus. The rates were the main question, in connection with railways.

Asked by Col. Gregory, if he favored government ownership, he said he did; but was afraid that there was no hope that public opinion throughout Canada was sufficiently advanced to adopt that principle in this place, of the schemes proposed. Taking that to be the case we could only do the next best thing and that was keep down the leading powers and secure control of rates by bonus or guarantee. He thought the very best solution of the railway problem was for the state to build and own the roads and leave them for operation to railway companies. In this way the roads would be received at actual cost, the rates would be under absolute control and the difficulties of political management of a business enterprise would be avoided. The railroad would then be as the canal area. Better service could and would be rendered for less money than could be by private enterprise.

C. T. Dayken asked the privilege of following Mr. Oliver, which was accorded. He criticized the tariff and Pacific railway policy of the liberals, but agreed with Mr. Oliver on the railway question in its present phase, that it was the most important question up for consideration, that it was not a party question and that something beyond what had yet been attempted was necessary if the public interest was to be protected. He suggested a guarantee of bond for the government taking stock as a means of securing control.

P. Hubbs, M. L. A., who occupied a seat on the platform, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Oliver, seconded by Col. Gregory, which was carried unanimously. The chairman in putting the vote passed most kindly and strongly of the confidence felt in Mr. Oliver as member for Alberta.
